

YOU ARE NOT A LIMPER

Your first big question: what “limps” do you now recognize that you have that someone told you – and you believed them?

The greatest power of understanding this metaphor is in that the “broken bone” is now the strongest. Recognizing that you were “limping” in the question above, what are the deepest truths as to what is really the strongest part of you now?

Realize that the power of the mind is limitless. Dig deep. What now can you claim, with complete reality, that this previously believed “brokenness” is now one of your strongest, most powerful, truths? (even if you don’t specifically know how yet... claim your power! This becomes a great strength for you now that you are aware!)
